

Dec. 12, 2014

To Whom it May Concern,

On March 7th, 2014 we invited Tracey Bell to be a featured speaker at the 6th Annual Project Bloom on International Women's Day. This project was developed to celebrate the accomplishments of remarkable women to connect and share their expertise to our communities.

The event was hosted in Harris Barn; a stunning facility originally built in 1900 and was recently disassembled timber by timber and restored, refurbished and relocated to its current location in Delta.

Tracey was asked to step in front of her usual character impersonations to share the story of how she came to be the Tracey Bell we know today. Tracey's fun but intimate story revealed her struggles and hopes for the future. It was a challenge for her to step away from her stage persona, but she did and leapt into the hearts of an appreciative audience.

Kind regard,

Kathie Madden

Co-Chair Project Bloom